

I am already disgusted with the propaganda we receive through the media as it is. I am also aware of the manipulation that goes on right now with just a handful of large corporations controlling what we read and hear. The idea that we live in a democracy is a joke when the truth as we know it is controlled by corporate america. There is no free debate or any real informative process now and you still want to deregulate the media with even fewer corporations controlling the distribution of information. As they say "information is power". If you can keep the masses ignorant then you can manipulate them to whatever end you want which is what these corporations are trying to do and don't tell me the FCC isn't behind it as well. This is no democracy- we live in a plutocracy controlled and manipulated by corporate interests. If anything we need more regulation and for the media to be owned by the people of a democratic society. Maybe then our government officials would be elected based on the truth and their willingness to serve the interests of the "people" not by a few deceptively placed bytes in some TV ad. All media should be publicly owned like public TV with very limited contributions from donors so we actually know what our government is up to and at who's expense. No deregulation of the media!!!
